Grupo Rotoplas, S.A.B. de C.V. (BMV: AGUA), the leader in innovative water management solutions across the Americas, announces the publication of its Sustainable Development Impact Disclosure \(SDID\), developed in collaboration with J.P. Morgan. As the second company globally and the first in Latin America to adopt this framework, Rotoplas reinforces its commitment to transparency and sustainable development. "The publication of our Sustainable Development Impact Disclosure \(SDID\) is a milestone for Rotoplas as we advance our mission to provide more and better water. In a world where water is essential to life, we must lead by example in promoting sustainable development. Not only are we focused on bringing water and sanitation to areas without access, but also on ensuring the sustainable use of water in places where access currently exists, but may not in the future. Adopting the SDID demonstrates our commitment to the UN Sustainable Development Goals and highlights how our water solutions can drive meaningful impact, ensuring that this vital resource remains accessible for future generations."

— Carlos Rojas Aboumrad, CEO of Grupo Rotoplas

"Sustainable investors are seeking companies that are committed to reducing global inequality and promoting mass prosperity. By publishing its SDID, Rotoplas highlights how it intends to expand access to safe water and sanitation services to segments of society that still lack access to these basic human needs. The SDID also provides transparency on how Rotoplas performs against these intentions, providing investors the information needed to engage with its impact strategy. We believe this commitment to impact transparency can help scale investment for advancing the UN Sustainable Development Goals."

— Arsalan Mahtafar, Head of J.P. Morgan Development Finance Institution
