June 10, 2026 . Direxion has announced it will executeforward share splits for two of its exchange.traded funds (ETFs), as well as reverse share splits foran additional seven ETFs. The totalmarket value of the shares outstanding will not be affected as a result of these splits, except with respect to the redemption of fractional shares, as outlined below. Reverse Splits After the close of the markets on July 14, 2026 (the Effective Date), each Fund noted in the table below will effect a reverse split of its issued and outstanding shares as follows. Accordingly, the total numberof the issued and outstanding shares for a Fund will decrease by theapproximate percentage indicated above. In addition, the per share NAVand next day s opening market price will be approximately ten.times higher for the Funds. Shares of theFunds will begin trading on the Exchange on a split.adjusted basis onJuly 15, 2026. The next day s opening market value of the Funds issuedand outstanding shares, and thus ashareholder s investment value, will not be affected by the reverse splits. The table below illustratesthe effect of a hypothetical one.for.ten reverse split anticipated forthe Funds. 1.for.10 Reverse SplitPeriod of Shares Owned HypotheticalNAV Total Market Value Pre.Split 1000 USD1 USD1,000 Post.Split 100 USD10 USD1,000 The Direxion Shares ETF Trust s transfer agent will notify the Depository Trust Company (DTC) of the reverse split and instruct DTC to adjust each shareholder sinvestment(s) accordingly. DTC isthe registered owner of the Funds shares and maintains a record of each Fund s record owners. Redemptionof Fractional Shares and Tax Consequences of the Reverse Split As a result of the reverse splits, a shareholder of a Fund s shares potentially could hold a fractional share. However, fractional shares cannot trade on the Exchange. Thus, a Fund will redeem for cash a shareholder sfractional shares at the Fund s split.adjusted NAV as of the Effective Date. Such redemption may have tax implications for those shareholders and a shareholder could recognize a gain or loss in connection withthe redemption of the shareholders fractional shares. Otherwise, thereverse splits will not result ina taxable transaction for holders of Fund shares. No transaction fee will be imposed on shareholders forsuch redemption.
